About the Access Guide

Today, Homewood is a food desert. Residents have low access to nutritious, affordable, and fresh food. Most of the food that is sold in local stores is highly processed and low in vitamin and nutritional content. This has a negative impact on individual and community health.

Homewood has a rich food history - from the fruit trees that used to line the streets to the family recipes that have been passed down with the generations. To put this guide together we talked with current residents in order to understand their relationship with and memories of food in their lives. We also spoke with organizations in Homewood who are working today to bring fresh and healthy food into the neighborhood.

This access guide is the result of those conversations. Its goal is to provide resources for residents in one place so they have knowledge of the healthy food options available to them. It is an effort of Rachel Bukowitz, an Elsie Hillman Scholar at the University of Pittsburgh, with support from the Homewood Children's Village.

Elsie Hillman Scholars

The Elsie Hillman Honors Scholars Program is run by the University of Pittsburgh's Institute of Politics. Its goal is to inspire and support students to develop new knowledge and/or action on critical social, economic, and political issues. It connects students with community partners in the Pittsburgh region to develop original civic engagement projects that explore and address issues important to the community partner and reflect the social commitment of Elsie Hillman. The program supports mindful leadership development and an understanding of the various types of civic engagement.

Rachel Bukowitz is a 2016-2017 Elsie Hillman Scholar who partnered with the Homewood Children's Village's Office of Child and Community Health. Their project focused on food access and security in Homewood.

Homewood Children's Village

The Homewood Children's Village is a nonprofit that serves the children and families of Homewood. Since 2010 it has been working to break down barriers to success that residents face both in the schools and in the community.

Voices From The Community

As part of our research we held "Food Talks" at Everyday Café for an evening in Homewood. Throughout the resource guide you will see the voices and experiences around food that members of the community shared with us.

Phipps Homegrown

Homegrown is a program of Phipps Conservatory and Botanical Gardens dedicated to increasing community access to fresh produce, promoting better food choices, and improving the overall health of families and children. Homegrown installs raised bed vegetable gardens free of charge to residents in Homewood. After the garden installation, Homegrown then supports the participants for two years with resources to become self-sufficient gardeners. Homegrown provides raised-bed building supplies, soil, seeds, plants, and garden tools free of charge. Participants agree to take care of their garden, attend monthly classes when able, and help new neighborhood gardeners after the second season.

Applications can be turned into to the Homewood-Brushton YMCA at 7140 Bennett Street, Pittsburgh, PA 15208, or mailed to: Phipps Garden Center Attn. Homegrown, 1059 Shady Ave, Pittsburgh, PA 15232.

Garden Resource Center

Grow Pittsburgh's Garden Resource Center is located at 147 Putnam Street Pittsburgh, 15206. The Garden Resource Center loans a variety of tools for gardening, farming, landscaping, and tree-tending to its members.

For backyard gardeners, individual community gardeners, and small-scale businesses, membership to the Garden Resource Center costs $40 a year. There are scholarships, EBT/SNAP discounts, and a $10 discount available for Grow Pittsburgh members.

For groups like community gardens and farms, food pantry gardens, or organizations, the cost is $80 a year. Once paid, all of the rentals are completely free. Hand tools have a 1-week rental period. Power tools are due next business day. Late fees vary.

To become a member, download and fill out an application from Grow Pittsburgh's website, or go directly to the Garden Resource Center to fill one out. You must provide: a photo ID to prove that you are at least 18 years old and live in Allegheny County, and a utility bill or lease agreement.

Shiloh Farm

Since 2008, Shiloh Farm has been located on the corner of Homewood Avenue and Thomas Boulevard, a formerly vacant lot. The small urban 'farm' is complete with in-ground production beds, herbs, figs, raspberries, and flowers to draw beneficial insects. There is also a large solar array on site which feeds into the neighboring home. They use organic growing techniques to grow produce, which primarily supplies their on-site farm stand, as well as their farmers market stand at the Homewood Farmers Market.

In conjunction with the Frick greenhouse and kitchen garden, Shiloh Farm serves as a site for assistants and apprentices to learn about and try small-scale urban farming techniques. Many other school and community groups use the site for tours, activities, and workdays. Visitors are welcome to peruse the garden anytime.

The Shiloh Farm Stand is open weekly on Thursdays, from June through October, 3:00-6:00 PM.

Black Urban Gardeners and Farmers of Pittsburgh Co-op (BUGS)

The Black Urban Gardeners and Farmers of Pittsburgh Co-op was created in 2015 out of the need to unite Black urban agriculturalists in the Pittsburgh area. They are a grassroots collective that works together to solve challenges that they face in Pittsburgh as Urban Growers and to dismantle the systemic racism that infiltrates communities.

The farm is located on a 31,000 square foot property in Homewood on Monticello Street between North Lang Ave and North Murtland Street. The farm will consist of hoop house models that provide BUGS the capacity to grow food all year long. The farm will be fully functional in October, 2017 and farm stand will follow in spring of 2018.

In the Fall of 2017, BUGS- FPC will be working with the students of Westinghouse surrounding Urban Agriculture and Food Justice for the Homewood community.

Sankofa Village Community Garden

Sankofa Village Community Garden is located at North Braddock Avenue and Susquehanna Street across from S&D Transit. They provide urban agricultural hands-on classes and instructional education for young people 5 - 13 years old. They also provide a mentoring environment for young people from 14 - 18 years old as summer employment. Sankofa Village Community Garden grows gardeners to develop food self-sufficiency and to eradicate food apartheid.

Oasis Farm and Fishery

Oasis Farm and Fishery is a micro-farm that includes a direct current, solar-powered greenhouse. The special design of the greenhouse classifies it as a bioshelter. Hydroponic and aquaponic growing systems operate inside the bioshelter. The bioshelter captures the rainwater off the building and filters it to be used for the farming systems.

The farm will grow leafy greens, culinary herbs, tomatoes, peppers, and microgreens to be sold and used hyper-locally at Everyday Café. Along with its outdoor gardens, the space is used to educate and train youth and community members on regenerative farming technologies, urban agriculture, entrepreneurship, culinary, and health matters.

Fresh Access

The Fresh Access program fights hunger by improving access to nutritious foods in more than a dozen area farmers markets. At these markets, the Just Harvest kiosk allows customers to shop with food stamps using their ACCESS/EBT card to purchase a variety of fresh produce, baked goods, meat, and dairy products. They also provide food stamp shoppers with Food Bucks to help them purchase fruits and vegetables at the markets. They are proud to work with Black Urban Gardeners and Farmers of Pittsburgh Co-op (BUGS FPC) as a Fresh Access Partner Market; the Homewood farmer's market is open the second and fourth Saturday of each month in the season from 10:00 - 2:00 PM and is located at the Homewood-Brushton YMCA.

East End Fruit Cart

The East End Fruit Cart is a youth entrepreneur summer program intent on creating employment and making fresh fruits widely accessible to residents of Pittsburgh. Sponsored by Bridgeway Capital and the Bloomfield-Garfield Corporation, with generous support from Eat'n Park, the six-week program will bring nutrition directly to people where they are this summer: at parks, community centers, libraries and basketball courts from June 26-August 14.

The participants, placed by the Eastside Neighborhood Employment Center, will contribute their skills and talents in operating a small business that promotes a culture of wellness. Addressing the food access problem in Pittsburgh requires multiple strategies and new approaches, creative and public-spirited.

They believe neighborhoods will support a vehicle that increases access to job training, knowledge, and direct business experience for young people so that they can make valuable connections and build social networks that will resonate in their communities.

The Fruit Cart will be at the Carnegie Library in Homewood on Wednesdays from 1:00-6:00 PM.

Stores

“I would love to see more convenience stores with fresh produce instead of so much junk.”

Fresh Corners

Just Harvest: Healthy Corner Store Initiative

The Fresh Corners initiative aims to increase community wide food access by partnering with existing, trusted corner and convenience stores in the community. The goal of this project is to promote healthy eating habits and expand the ability of residents to purchase fresh food products through locally accessible stores. To ensure success, Just Harvest provide stores with incentives and support to carry fresh or healthy food products. The support may be in the form of produce coolers or other store equipment, training, marketing assistance, or relationships with local farms and vendors.

Everyday Café

Everyday Café is Pittsburgh’s first completely cashless coffeehouse. It sells fair-trade organic coffee, locally baked pastries, made-to-order sandwiches, and fresh soups and salads. The café offers free high-speed internet, a mix of comfortable seating and work tables, and a small performance stage. It is conveniently located by the “gateway” to Homewood—the Martin Luther King Jr. East Busway’s Homewood Station—at 532 N. Homewood Avenue.

Youth Programs

YMCA Summer Camp

The Homewood-Brushton Summer Camp is open for kids ages 5-12 years old. It runs from June 19th-August 15th 2017. Each week has a different theme, so children can be signed up for anywhere between one and ten weeks. Each week the kids will have a lesson in the garden.

Grow Pittsburgh School Gardens Program

Grow Pittsburgh's School Garden Program integrates garden and cooking activities into the regular classroom curriculum to teach students to grow, cook, and eat fresh food. They have a garden and weekly classes at Faison Elementary School, as well as a learning garden at Lincoln Elementary School. Most recently, Grow Pittsburgh has partnered with Westinghouse High School to install a learning garden. The learning garden program trains parents and teachers to manage the garden so that it can be sustained by the community.

Junior Green Corps

Operation Better Block's Junior Green Corps program enables Homewood teens ages 14-18 to gain academic support, green education, work readiness, and community engagement experiences through structured activities that impact their physical environment. During the school year, the Green Corps meets four days a week from 3:00 - 5:00 PM. During the summer, the Green Corps meets four days a week from 9:00 - 3:00 PM. During this time, the teens work on a variety of projects, including gardening in Homewood. The Green Corps is still taking applications for teens who would like to be involved.

Healthy Cooking, Eating, and Growing

The Urban League of Greater Pittsburgh's Healthy Cooking, Eating, and Growing Program (HCEG) brings young people together with seniors for intergenerational cooking and healthy eating. HCEG programming ranges from nutritional classes to canning and cooking techniques. In the past, HCEG worked with Silver Lake Commons and Boy Scout Group 760 to install gardens and prepare a holiday feast with produce from the garden. This year they will be expanding to work with the Homewood House as well.

Learn and Earn

Urban Farmers in Training (UFIT)

As part of the City's Learn and Earn Program, and in partnership with the Homewood Children's Village, Grow Pittsburgh runs the Urban Farmers in Training (UFIT) Program. This summer internship provides teenagers with the opportunity to: 1) learn to grow food, 2) learn to cook using seasonal produce from the farm, 3) understand the food system, and 4) build leadership and public speaking skills. It is a six-week program that runs for six hours a day; 9:00 - 3:00 PM, Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday. The UFIT teens work in gardens around Homewood, including the YMCA's garden and Farm Stand, the Faison Elementary School garden, the Sankofa Village for the Arts garden and summer camp, and the Shiloh Farm run by Grow Pittsburgh.

CUSP: Climate and Urban Systems Partnership

The goals of the Climate and Urban Systems Partnership (CUSP) is to create discussions around local impacts of climate change, adaptations, and solutions. Starting on June 26th, 2017, the Carnegie Museum of Natural History will work with five Learn and Earn teenagers from Homewood to create and facilitate CUSP climate change education kits.

CUSP kits explore local climate change impacts and solutions. The kits cover a range of climate change topics, including food systems. The Hidden Cost Café is the CUSP kit relating to food systems; this interactive game reveals how carbon dioxide released from food production contributes to climate change. Kits like the Hidden Cost Café can be rented through the CUSP lending library. The kits must be requested at least one week in advance.
